

Title II protection of net neutrality is extremely important. No company or person(s) should have the ability to affect a user's open and equal access to the internet. Commissioner Ajit Pai's assertion that net neutrality would not be affected by returning to Title I is patently false. One only needs to look at how ISP's favored their own online payment system (ISIS) over Google Pay. In addition, Mr. Pai's claim that Title II has affected ISP's investment in infrastructure is also provably false - Verizon's CEO, in a phone call with investors, stated that they will continue with their current investment despite Title II protection of net neutrality.

Please do NOT remove Title II protection. ISP's have already demonstrated that they will throttle (slow) or block websites such as Netflix in favor of their own content.

The FCC Open Internet Rules (net neutrality rules) are extremely important to me. I urge you to protect them.

Thank you! Steven John Herrmann
